

Project Group Unbreakable 2019

Vice project leader

You are a “people person” first hand. Your main assignment is to create a good internal communication in the project group and make sure that everyone is doing well. You and the project leader work closely to create the best possible team spirit and work to make this Unbreakable the best edition so far. Your role also includes assistance to the project leader in different tasks, for an example making sure that the group follows the set timeframe.

Marketing manager

If you love to communicate and have a passion for making good content that creates a hype, you are the one we are looking for! In your role as a marketing manager you are responsible for managing all communication in the project and also coming up with new creative ideas to build the Unbreakable brand. It's preferred if you have experience in working with editing software and graphic design.

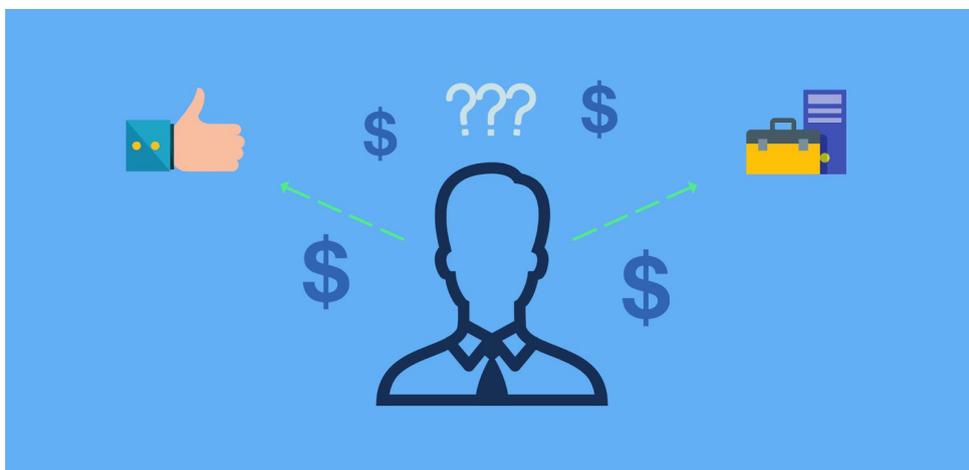

Event marketing specialist

You love to talk to new people, good at networking and spread the word about Unbreakable 2019. As an event marketing specialist you are going to create events and competitions to build up the hype for the race. To be suitable for the role you are a creative person who likes to organise and have the ambition to make every event epic.

Sales manager

You aim to build long lasting professional contacts with companies and are willing to walk the extra mile to get the deal. As a sale coordinator your main task is to make new partners to the project. The role includes contacting companies to make sponsorships deals and cooperate with the logistics manager to assure that the sponsors get their money's worth.

Logistics coordinator

Your job is to organise and make the logistics of the sponsoring go smooth. Your role includes to plan and make sure that all the sponsoring will be on the right place at the right time. You make sure that the sponsors are well and correctly represented during race day.

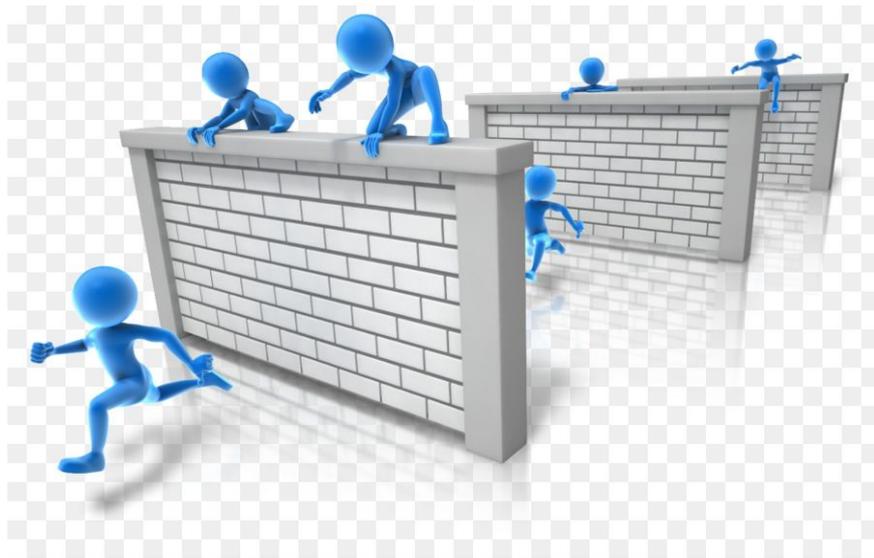

Controller

If you love economy and would like to get better at accounting, making budgets and other economy related tasks, you are the one we are looking for! As a controller you are responsible for the economy in the project. You will be making sure that the project stays within budget and that every receipt and invoice are being accounted for. You are also responsible together with the sales team to make sure that you get every deal to the best possible price.

Obstacle designer team

Would you love to create and build obstacles for the participants? Then you are the right person for this task! As an obstacle designer you need to be both creative and realistic at the same time. You are responsible for looking up what materials and equipments you need to make your ideas to come true. You also make the planning for the route of the race.

Training consultant

Do you have a passion for training and would like to develop your skills in leadership? Your role will be to motivate and to give the participants and everyone who is interested in Unbreakable, the best possible training to finish the race in May. You are a part of the marketing team and your main focus will include building a training program and lead the group trainings. You are also responsible for the warm-up on the raceday.

